DEVELOPMENT EVERYWHERE.

It has been known for some time that the officers of the Jacksonville Mining & Manufacturing Company have been in negotiation with a certain large Eastern and foreign interest to secure the establishment of a steel plant at Tredegar. Negotiations were indeed well advanced several weeks ago, but were seriously jeopardized by the premature announcement made in several southern papers, whose Tredegar correspondents telegraphed exaggerated rumors concerning the matter. The negotiations were not closed in fact until Thursday of last week, and then of course subject to the satisfaction of the Steel Company's engineer with the site, facilities, transportation arrangements, water supply, etc.

The steel movement, involving collateral projects and improvements of the greatest importance, has been watched and carefully noted by the REPUBLICAN, and the officers of the company have courteously kept us advised of every step. We have refrained from giving publicity to these matters until now, in order not to embarrass the extensive and delicate negotiations which have been in progress. At this date the entire movement has advanced so far beyond the danger line that reliance is no longer necessary. It may be said, therefore, that the steel company has unofficially notified President Burke, that their chief engineer would be at Tredegar within ten days of two weeks to lay out the plant, plan the water improvements, select clay from which to make the 17,500,000-bricks which the plant will consume, and start the work in general.

It has been not generally known that the most obstructive feature in the effort to secure this great plant has been the question of obtaining a satisfactory and adequate supply of pure water so situated as to be at once convenient to sites for the various departments of the plant, to railway transportation and to the division of the city of Tredegar which is to form the residence of the steel workers, who, with their families will constitute a community of about 12,000 souls. The only portion of Tredegar offering these conditions approximately, is included within the area east of the E. T. V. & G. railway, southwest of Cherry Hill and south of the business part of the city—Park Avenue, the railway station, etc.

People who have gone over the country horeabouts in a scientific way, are quite aware that the geological formations in the area indicated are badly faulted, and especially so in the direction of the old town. It is true that the Village Spring feeds a considerable branch which runs through the territory, and has been locally regarded as offering a large supply of water for industrial purposes. The experts of the steel company, who have made several visits here for the purpose of ascertaining the question, have not been able to find a single spring branch which would satisfy all their purposes. Even if it should prove ample for manufacturing purposes, it could not be guaranteed free from contamination as the present town should grow to the proportions of a large industrial town. If it could be protected from contamination it would still be not available for the domestic and fire purposes, and for the sewerage of the ward of the skilled workers to be established opposite the steel company's site beyond the E. T. V. & G. railway and south of Mrs. Gaboury's residence. The matter was finally settled by two prominent gentlemen connected with the enterprise, both experts, who were in the city last Monday. After studying the formations and the levels and other data previously taken for their guidance, it was decided that all the required conditions could be secured in but one way, which is to place the furnace, steel mill, general rolling mill, rail mill and other departments close to the E. T. V. & G. track. Next, to sink one or more large artesian wells and to construct and connect with the same a considerable reservoir on the summit of the ridge west of the city, and immediately above the skilled workers ward and the steel plant site. Following a careful consideration of all the points involved, the representatives of the steel interest decided to build such water works, it being agreed with the general manager of the Mining & Manufacturing Company, that the works in question were to be of sufficient capacity to supply water for all purposes to the workers' district, to the several tiers of fine business property along the west side of the E. T. V. & G. railway and opposite to the steel plant, and also to the business portion of the city as far north as, or nearly, an east and west line drawn across the south end of Cedarhurst Park. Water to be in ample supply and with sufficient pressure to provide for sewerage, fire supply and all domestic purposes.

One of the chief reasons why the steel people propose this improvement, in which outside Eastern capitalists are to join them, is that they express the determination at the start to secure to their operatives an ample provision of absolutely pure wholesome water, so derived that contamination of any possible description shall be impossible. How far they may have to bore from the top of the ridge to strike the nether water courses of the Archon system, as is believed from the watershed of the Great Smoky Mountains away up in Tennessee, is a matter of conjecture; but the parties interested state to us that it does not matter, as they will be quite prepared to go down 1500 or 2000 feet, or even more if necessary. It is needless to say that this improvement will be of the highest value and importance to every foot of property West of the railway. With the certainty of abundant public water supply, perfect sewerage, and protection from fire, west side property from the south line of the steel plant site to Atkin's Grove will be as valuable for business purposes as any property in any Alabama city. It will be all needed for the accommodation of the host of merchants and tradesmen who will begin to pour in here in the autumn.

When it is considered that the work of laying out the site, creating and accumulating the material necessary to construction, and the building of houses for the operatives of the great iron and steel plant alone will employ a contingent of wage earners equal to our present population, it is not hard to conceive that lively times for Tredegar are in store for the immediate future. The plans for all the Steel Company's buildings and machinery were put on the drawing boards last Saturday. Every department of the work of preparation and construction is to be pushed to the utmost, and there will be something tangible to show for it on the ground within a few weeks.

Coincidentally with the successful settlement of the iron and steel plant and rolling mill question, work on the site of the Tredegar Brick and Tile Company's works is to commence this week, and we are advised that the machinery for the Tredegar cotton seed oil mill and fertilizer factory is nearly ready and will be shipped within three or four days. As soon as the shipment has been made the buildings for the plant will be commenced.

A new era now opens for the brick, building stone, lime, lathe, cement, lumber, planing mill and timber industries at Tredegar. Not less than a dozen fine brick business edifices only await a supply of brick. The company's new office building and the bank on Park Avenue, and a number of stores and office buildings will start up just as soon as material can be made available. Several Eastern investors who have purchased property on Park, Wyly and Virginia avenues have indicated their intention to improve before autumn if they can secure brick and finished lumber in time. It is well known that leading local people are ready to do the same. In view of the fact that we have in and around Tredegar an inexhaustible resource of superior clays, limestone, timber and everything else necessary or desirable for the production of first-class building material of every name and kind, every member of the community should constitute himself a committee of one to promote the introduction of one to promote the introduction of limestone quarries, building of lime kilns, establishment of lumber yards, sash, door and blind factories, furniture factories, and all the rest of it. From present indications a production of 200,000 brick per day for the next two years will not supply the local demand, while there is little doubt that a production of from a half to three quarters of a million a day could be sold before they could be made, right along. There is a dearth of bricks everywhere. There are not many points in Alabama possessing first rate material and facilities for brick making. We have them and can find markets for all the product we can turn out.

The REPUBLICAN is advised that plans for the new Tredegar Arms Hotel will be put in hand this month so that the work can be commenced as soon as brick, stone and other requisites are gotten together. Looking over the situation it occurs to this journal that the people of Tredegar have good cause to celebrate the Fourth of July with a vim this year. Material progress was a long time in striking us, but it appears to have come on with a rush at last.

SHE FLOORED HIM.

Excitement in a Baptist Church at Boyce, Tenn.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 29.—The neighboring suburb of Boyce is all torn up with a sensation which is absorbing the social and religious circles of the entire community. George LaFerry is a well-known Baptist divine, whose efforts in bringing souls to repentance have on more than one occasion received substantial recognition. Friday night he held services in Ebenezer Church at Boyce. A large congregation, embracing the best people of the town, was present. Rev. LaFerry preached a wholesome, substantial sermon of the Spurgeon type, and the trite truth seemed to sink deep into the hearts of his hearers. Just as he finished his sermon, a tall, robust female arose from her seat and advanced toward the pulpit. The congregation immediately recognized her as Mrs. Fenn Crow, wife of a leading resident of Boyce. Mrs. Crow has long been prominent as a leader at the religious meetings which are held from time to time in the devout little suburb.

Mrs. Crow stood in the aisle until the benediction was pronounced. Then she advanced toward the pastor and with eyes flashing fire began excepting to the doctrine he had been preaching. The twain passed down the aisle to the door, preceded by the congregation and engaged in a vigorous polemic discussion. Suddenly the shrill voice of the woman rang out on the air with the word "jie." The bystanders looked up just in time to see the woman's right arm shoot forward like a catapult and land on the minister's neck. LaFerry fell like a log. It was a clean knock down. LaFerry, despite his clerical calling, reached for a stone. The woman's husband cried out: "For God's sake, Elder LaFerry, don't hit my wife!" Here members of the congregation interfered, and the belligerents were hurried off to their respective homes.

Medicinal Enthusiasm.

Some physicians, noticing the excellent tonic antiperiodic and antipyretic properties of Smith's Tonic Syrup, have endeavored to ascertain its composition. Of course the properties of this valuable remedy would wrong themselves if they made the secret of their cure public property. Why should its composition be considered so long as it proves an effectual remedy and as easily obtainable of druggists as is quinine. Many people who buy and use quinine don't know it is made from peruvian bark. They don't care to know. They know it nearly always cures the chills and fever, and that is all they want it for. So too, the people know that Smith's Tonic Syrup is better than quinine. They know it cures chills and fever when quinine fails. They know also that Smith's Tonic Syrup will break up a cold or an attack of influenza, la grippe, etc., quicker than any other drug. They know also that it is pleasant to take and never leaves any unpleasant after effect. They know also that it can be used as a substitute for quinine and always with more satisfactory results.

Answer This Question.

Why do so many people we see around us seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming Up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cents we will sell them Smith's System Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them.

The Story of Miss Rossiter.

MARGARET ROSSITER.

"By Jove! she is a beautiful woman." My cousin delivered this opinion with the air of one making an astonishing discovery, and yet no one gave a word of assent, neither did the quickest ear catch a murmur of denial. A moment of silence followed this muffled outburst, and then my grandmother was greeting the new arrival in her stately way. Another moment and we were all bowing to Sybil Rossiter. I for my part, with the queerest mingling of sensations I had ever known.

Now, to tell you just why Miss Rossiter had come to our home on this dark, stormy night so long ago. "Ours was a proud and really, claiming and really possessing the blood of the old-world-sung Douglas—Scottish name, in home and in blood. We were also Scottish in temperament, and like our own little, it rudely handled, were not slow to resent or defend and punish."

My grandmother was a true Douglas, stately and graceful, but cold and haughty to whomsoever had the misfortune to incur her displeasure. To me she was kind and as affectionate as her cold nature would permit, but then I was Elsie Dunbar, with three castles and "siller and gould weel aigh countess," as my old Scotch nurse often said. My mother was a Douglas, and had wedded the last of the Dunbars—to the great satisfaction of my grandmother.

I was the only, and now orphaned child of the union, and "My Lady Elsie" was a person of no small importance in the household of Douglas. During the early girlhood of my mother and her sister—now Lady Wellesly—a niece of my grandmother had been their companion, making her home at Glen-Douglas. At the age of 18 she had married an impetuous young Irish lawyer, and from that time she was lost sight of. My grandmother had been bitterly opposed to the marriage, but her opposition being unavailing, she closed her doors forever upon Sybil Wellesly and sternly refused to hold any communication with her. She never forgave her, and as time went on had almost ceased to remember the willful girl.

My aunt, Lady Wellesly, had about a month before our story opens, advertised for a companion. To her great surprise, one morning she received the following letter:—"Dear Lady Wellesly, Glen-Douglas—Madam: Having read your advertisement in the Times of recent date, I take the liberty of replying to same. I have had a position as lady's companion once before, but can give no reference, as the lady with whom I lived died suddenly and I am acquainted with no one else in this place. However, you may remember my mother, Sybil Wellesly, as she made Glen-Douglas her home at one time. My father and mother are now both dead. The former died when I was 3 years old, the latter left me two years ago."

Then followed a straightforward business like statement as to her requirements, also in regard to terms, etc., and signed Sybil Rossiter.

When my aunt finished reading the letter a silence fell upon us all, and then my grandmother spoke:—"A Douglas out among strangers, working for a living! Scandalous! write at once, Lucy, and tell her to come. I suppose we must extend this much charity to her."

And Aunt Lucy, who detested "poor relations," sat down and wrote to Miss Rossiter, stiffly offering her a home, saying she would look elsewhere for a hired companion.

Straightway came back a grateful and sweet, but proudly icy note, from Miss Rossiter, saying that she would accept no charity, and would come as a "hired" companion or not at all.

Very icily my grandmother bade Aunt Lucy write and engage "the pauper," saying in her cold, stately fashion:—"We cannot have a Douglas working for a living and telling everyone that we are treating her badly. She must come."

In a moment I saw that my grandmother did not like her. Aunt Lucy—a feeble copy and a more spiteful one of her mother—made her greeting in the most frigid of tones, but was fairly outdone by Miss Rossiter, whose voice, as my cousin James whispered to me, was as sweet and cold as one of Berne's choicest ices.

As her long wrap fell from her shoulders, I told myself she was the most superb being I had ever seen. As I look back through the mist of years, I can see her now, just as I saw her then.

She was a tall woman, as graceful as a flower stalk, with hair that might have nestled often on the breast of Mother Earth the while the suns cattered it, dangling his rays in its meshes. True Irish eyes, of wonderful gray, looked proudly out from beneath their dark fringing, but the beautiful mouth gently but firmly moulded, proclaimed her right to wreath thistle with shamrock and wear it upon her breast.

That night she seemed to read in the face of each and every one, the liking or dislike conceived for her. To my grandmother and Aunt Lucy, she was cold and reserved. To Cousin James, or Jamie, as we called him, she was cordial, and when she greeted me, to my great astonishment, she raised my face and kissed me.

From that time we were as near as sympathy as could be expected from one of Miss Rossiter's temperament. What a strange creature she was! So beautiful that my glances followed her as she moved through the drawing room, and, as Aunt Lucy fretfully complained, "One would have thought her a princess rather than a paid companion!"

At times she would speak to me with the freedom of a child, then of a sudden her mood would change, and she would bid me leave her to herself. One morning I came upon her in the rose arbor. She was sitting with her hands clasped listlessly around her knees. For the first time I noticed how white her hands really were and how lithe and strong were the long "white" fingers that twined themselves carelessly around each other. Involuntarily I thought of Aunt Lucy's words the night of Miss Rossiter's arrival: "She has hands fitted to strangle: an enemy rather than to caress a friend!"

I often wondered why it was, she conceived the liking for me. We were opposites in every trait. One morning in passing she caught my arm and almost crushed it in her strong grasp. I cried out with the pain, and then with a soft, caressing little touch she soothed the wounded member.

"Poor little arm," she said softly; "did I hurt it so badly? Do you know, Elsie, I believe there is something of the fingers in me? I never see a frail delicate thing but the instinct to seize it and rend and tear it in a thousand places is almost uncontrollable. And yet I am not a cruel woman. Only yesterday, while coming from the village, I saw a rough boy torturing a kitten. The suffering of the poor little thing made me furious, and the next thing the boy knew, I had him by the arms shaking him until he gasped for breath. My nails dug deep into his flesh and when he cried out with the pain, I only laughed in his face and said it was a proper punishment for his cruelty. I couldn't help sorry for him even though I knew I had hurt him. Bah! He deserved it, but he will hate me ever and always."

I looked at her with wondering eyes, seeing which she laughed gaily, but with strangely glittering eyes and said:—"Oh, little Elsie! You wonder at me? But remember I am not a child of the heather clone. The thistle is more prominent in me, and then I have not always found one a twin sister to the last."

"Tell me Miss Rossiter"—none of us ventured to call her Sybil—"where did you spend your early life? You have never yet spoken of it to me."

"Little Elsie, my heather queen," she said with some mockery in her tones, "my early life is so far away that I can remember nothing of it. It is a barren waste town in with salt—let us not go over it, the present only is of value!"

Before I could reply, she sped away from me, but as she turned, I caught a glimpse of a white set face, and eyes that gleamed like those of a wild animal.

She did not reappear all that day, but when the night came bringing a few invited guests, Miss Rossiter entered the drawing room stately and cold as though nothing had ever marred the serenity of her life's passage.

As the evening wore on my grandmother, who loved to dwell on the traditions of our race, related a quaint little story of olden time.

"There is nothing like these old stories of a great race," remarked one of the gentlemen. "After all, the memory of a thing is half its sweetness."

"Memories!" repeated Miss Rossiter. "They are hideous things to be handled with gloves lest they sting. I hate them!"

She had risen, and as the last word left her lips she turned and trailed her amber draperies very slowly out of the room, as haughty, as some beautiful eastern queen.

My aunt gave a little shrug of scorn, "I do not like Miss Rossiter, she is too intense," she said in that lady-like, calm and malicious voice of hers; no one replied.

Toward the close of autumn, I was to be married to Sir John Islay, and though Miss Rossiter had been with us for some time, I had never spoken to her of it, until the day before his long expected visit and now I remember that I mentioned no name in speaking of my fiancé.

"So you are to be married little Elsie," she said with that soft caressing little touch of hers. "Child, do you know what it is to stake your all on one cast, totally ignorant whether you will win or lose? Bah! what am I saying to you? Of course you will be happy—every is but me! Listen to me. I had a lover once; like you I was looking forward to my wedding day. The diamond on your finger does not sparkle brighter than did my happy tears when I knew I was beloved. You see, she said, "He gave me that ring in exchange I slipped on my chain chain a hideous little death's head, and laughed while I told him it was a sign of good fortune to death, which could never touch our love. 'Twas an evil omen, but a true one, for death cannot touch that which has never lived, and his love for me was but in words. He was false to me through it all, and I spurned him from me, once I knew of his perfidity, swearing never to believe, never to trust and never, so long as I should live, to forgive him. I have never seen him since. I heard after we parted that he never married. The woman for whom he deserted me and so I still wear the ring to remind me of my oath. Do I love him yet? Child, I hate him, and yet one fire cannot burn another; the flame of hate and flame of love burn steadily side by side, and I feed them with memories. If there be a God I know he will bless you wherever you are," and then she had left me in her strange, abrupt way, leaving me to ponder over her sorrowful story.

At night she came to my room, her face drawn and white with pain, and asked for some chloral, as she was suffering from neuralgia. I gave it to her, cautioning her to take but very little.

She laughed recklessly as she answered: "My mother died of heart disease—painless way of gliding into the infinite."

"Perhaps you had better not—"

"Bah! little Elsie, it doesn't matter, and it will still pain," she said recklessly, as she left the room.

The next morning she was missing and on entering the room the housekeeper gave a shriek of terror which brought us scared and trembling to a chamber of death.

Glen Douglas was closed and quiet when my betrothed arrived and I welcomed him very soberly. I told him of the sad accident—if such it was. "Miss Rossiter," he repeated over and over again, "Sybil, did you say her name was? Surely I know the name."

He was playing with the chain of his watch and as I glanced at his hands a hideous little death's head grinned at me from his fingers. A horrible fear seized me. His hesitancy about the name—the charm! It could not be true, this terrible suspicion that lurked in my mind.

"She is in here," I said, harshly, turning toward the door. "Come in I wish you to see how beautiful she is."

She had never looked more lovely. A faint coloring remained in the face, which had lost some of its harsher lines.

I watched my betrothed narrowly. At first his face did not change in its expression; then a gleam of recognition came into his eyes.

"Heavens!" he exclaimed, and thrusting his hand into his breast pocket, drew forth a pictured face—that of the dead girl!

"Did you know her?" I asked, coldly.

"I have never seen her before," he said slowly; "but I know her story—a sad one it is. My cousin Islay was her lover, and deserted her after winning her heart."

"I know the story," I said faintly.

"Poor Islay," he went on absently, "he died last winter in Egypt and on his death bed told me of this girl. He gave me this charm, and made me promise to return it to her if ever I saw her—and she is dead!"

He was fingering it absently, and becoming unfastened it rolled down into the coffin on the breast of the dead girl where it lay grinning at me with horrible glee.

I shuddered as I turned away. "Come," I said to my companion, "it is stifling in here."

"Poor Sybil," I said, when once more we were outside the chamber of death; "she knew nothing but unhappiness in life, and if her death was premeditated—"

"Hush," my companion said gently, his finger on my lips, "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

Poor Sybil! the smile on her face might have said, "Because the way is short, I thank thee, God."

HE WILL BE HANGED.

The Governor of South Carolina Rejects a Petition for Commutation.

Columbia, S. C., June 29.—The governor yesterday acted on a petition for the commutation of Jasin and Armstead Jones, the two young brothers who were sentenced to be hanged at Orangeburg, on July 11th. On account of the extreme youth of Jasin Jones—thirteen years—the jury recommended him to mercy. On the strength of this recommendation the judge and solicitor joined in the petition for executive clemency, and the governor commuted Jasin's sentence to ten years in the penitentiary. Armstead Jones, being three years older than his brother, and having actually committed the murder, was not favorably recommended by the judge or jury, and the governor refused to interfere. He will be hanged on July 11th.

The murder was one of the most deliberate and cold-blooded on record. The stepsons had a quarrel with their father's wife, and determined to put an end to her. An old gun was procured and loaded, and Jasin and Armstead took their stand behind some bushes near the spring, and awaited the coming of Mrs. Jones for water. Their stepmother soon appeared, and was shot dead. They attempted to conceal the body, but afterwards confessed the crime.

A New "Original Package" Bill.

The House of Representatives committee on the judiciary, after having under consideration for four meetings the United States Senate "original package" bill, has decided to report to the House in its stead, a substitute agreed on by the committee yesterday morning with one dissenting voice. It is broader in scope than the Senate bill, inasmuch as its provisions apply to all articles of interstate commerce, whereas the Senate bill only applies to intoxicating liquors. The substitute is as follows: "That whenever any article of commerce is imported into any State, Territory or foreign nation, and then held or offered for sale, the same shall then be subject to the laws of such State; provided that no discrimination shall be made by any State in favor of its citizens against those of other States in respect to the sale of any article of commerce, nor in favor of its own products against those of like character produced in other States, nor shall the transportation of commerce through any State be obstructed, except in the necessary enforcement of the health laws of such State." Representative Reed, of Iowa, will prepare the report on the bill, and Representative Adams, who voted against the bill, will probably make a minority report.

The Secrecy of Conspirators.

The crowning piece of impudence occurring during the present session of Congress is to be credited to Henry Cabot Lodge, though probably he had a number of party associates in the affair. It was an attempt to keep from the press and the Republican Members of Congress generally the compromise Lodge-Rowell election bill, which was the subject of discussion at last night's caucus. The introduction of the bill after its completion was placed in the hands of Mr. Lodge. He introduced it on Saturday afternoon in such a way as to attract no attention, and then sent a note to the files room to have it kept away from the newspaper men.

For the first time in the history of Congress a bill of this sort was kept out of sight after its introduction, the manifest purpose being to keep the Republicans of the House in ignorance of the details of the bill until it could be dragged through the caucus. This piece of cheek came near being a success, but about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Lodge was smoked out and was forced to make the bill public after having successfully concealed it for nearly two days after its introduction. The Yankees in the House are crafty with the nerve to back it up.—Washington Post.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Denman have the sympathy of all the people here in the loss of their little son Blake, who died June 30, 1890. The little boy was about two years and six months old, and his death is a very great bereavement to his parents.

While Mr. Hurter has completed the work of taking the census of this place, he says he is not permitted to tell us the number of people who live inside the corporate limits.

As we go to press large crowds are seen wending their way to the picnic at Four Mile. Mr. John Parker will give them a good time.

There were quite a number of our citizens went to Chattanooga Thursday to attend the grand Re-union of Confederate Veterans. Among them were: Messrs. Wm. H. Dean, S. R. Wilkerson, Joseph J. Arnold, Chas. N. Arnold and Ed. D. J. Hill.

There has been much activity in the real estate here during the present week, and property has sold for much better prices than at any time heretofore.

From present indications there will be no dull season in Jacksonville this summer. There will be much activity in every interest connected with the town, and a large growth for the next two years is already assured.

Mr. Frank Crawford and his charming bride were welcomed by his parents at their house in this city on Sunday last. A few of their friends were invited to dine with them. It is needless to say that, what with the joy, incident to a bridal occasion, the naturally genial good humor of the hosts, and a splendid dinner, such as Mrs. Crawford knows how to give, all enjoyed themselves exceedingly.

After a most pleasant day we came away feeling that Mr. Frank Crawford had shown his usual good taste and judgment in the selection of a partner for life, and that he deserved the success he had achieved.

We wish the happy couple a long, prosperous and happy union.

A GUEST.

Property holders on Francis Avenue are refusing twenty-five dollars a front foot.

Elder Hoke, an old and respected colored woman, died last night at the advanced age of ninety years.

When you are tired, hot and nervous go to Doctor's and try a glass of egg-phosphate.

Parties owning property on Park Avenue have been offered an advance of from five to ten dollars per foot, this week, which offers were refused.

The Ice Cream Supper given by the ladies of the Episcopal Church on last Monday night, was a decided success, quite a neat sum being realized for the commendable cause to which it was devoted.

Hon. John W. Inzer, of St. Clair, was nominated in the Sixth District for the Senate last Wednesday by acclamation. He is one of the best men in the State, and the Sixth District it to be congratulated upon securing the service of so able a legislator to look after her interest in the next Senate.

Mrs. Judge Crook received a telegram last Thursday announcing the death of her father, Major Whitfield Walker, of Jacksonville, Florida. Major Walker was one of Florida's distinguished men. He was Internal Revenue Collector at Jacksonville under Cleveland's administration, and refused to leave the city two years ago during the epidemic of yellow fever because he thought it his duty to remain and attend to the affairs of his office. He had yellow fever and never fully recovered. He had been prominent in his State for the United States Senate, and could doubtless have been elected to that position several years ago if he had entered the contest. Mrs. Crook has the sympathy of all the people of this community.

KING-WYLY.

Married, in Jacksonville, Ala., Wednesday evening, July 2nd, 1890, at the residence of Mrs. Wyly, by Rev. J. H. Patton, Mr. Joe C. King, of Rome, Ga., to Miss Ida Wyly, of Jacksonville.

The marriage was attended only by the near relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride is said to have been artistically attired, and the groom was handsomely dressed, and appeared strong and manly as should one who has captured one of Calhoun's most lovely daughters.

The groom is a prominent young man in the commercial world through this section, and has the promise of a bright future.

The bride is not only lovely and accomplished, but has been one of Jacksonville's most popular young ladies. Probably no one ever left the town who had more friends than has she. Her thoughtfulness, her cheerfulness, her suavity, will always draw around her a host of strong personal friends, and the sweetness of her disposition will always keep her from making an enemy.

The entire citizenship of Jacksonville unite in wishing the bride and groom a prosperous and happy life.

The bridal presents were numerous and valuable.

The newly married couple left on the southbound East Tennessee train Wednesday night and will spend several weeks at St. Simon's Island.

Better Late Than Never.

I ought to have informed the people of Jacksonville before this that the largest and best stock of Books and Stationery of all kinds, at lowest prices, is kept in Anniston by Jos. Eros, on Noble street near the stone bridge (just building.) Mail orders promptly filled. Drawing papers of all kind, Architect's and Engineer's Instruments. It will pay you to come and see me for any Books or Stationery.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Last Wednesday morning the relatives of Mrs. M. M. Reed, widow of the late Rev. Thomas Reed, were astounded when they went to her bed and found that she was dead. She retired the night before in her usual health, and no one dreamed that she would be dead before morning. She slept with her little niece, and during the night did not make sufficient noise to awake her or any member of the family. Mrs. Reed was a kind, gentle and most estimable woman, and her sudden and most unexpected death is mourned by her relatives and friends.

Death of Rev. D. F. Smith.

This gentleman died in Tennessee last Friday. His death was sudden. He was well known in this country, having lived in Jacksonville a number of years and was pastor of the Presbyterian church at that place. He married a sister of Dr. B. S. Evans, of White Plains, and has a daughter engaged as art teacher at Oxford College. He has other relatives and friends in Calhoun county.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of Mrs. Letitia Vernon who was born in Rutherford county North Carolina, February 21, 1821, and died at Jacksonville, Alabama, June 15, 1890, after suffering for fifteen years with spinal affection.

Although she retained the greatest mental vigor to the last, during the greater part of her affliction she was almost as helpless as a new born babe.

Having been endowed by nature with a fine mind and retentive memory, being well educated, and ever finding delight in adding to her store of knowledge, she read a great deal during her latter years and thus found a source of real pleasure which only a cultured mind can appreciate and enjoy.

Being fervent, blessed with faith in the wisdom, mercy and goodness of our heavenly father, she was enabled to bear her heavy and long affliction without a murmur of tongue and with little or no rebellion at heart.

More than forty years ago she made a public profession of her faith in Christ, since which she has been a consistent member of the Baptist church.

Her submission to the will of God, her cheerfulness when not suffering acute pain, and her contentment under the most trying ordeals present an example worthy of imitation by those disposed to complain and rebel under lighter afflictions.

On March 12, 1844 she was married to Maj. H. F. Vernon, who made her a devoted and faithful husband.

Their union was blessed with four children—three of whom she lived to see buried—one, a daughter who died in infancy, and two sons who died after reaching manhood's estate and a surviving daughter, Mrs. L. D. Miller, whose self-sacrificing and untiring attentions to an afflicted mother, during fifteen years, forms a model of filial devotion and duty rarely equalled.

Up to the time she became paralyzed Mrs. Vernon was a woman of great energy and always possessed fine judgment in business affairs. She was noted as a kind wife, a devoted mother, a true friend and good neighbor. She passed away without a struggle, as if falling into a gentle and peaceful sleep.

"How best the righteous, when she dies!"

When slinks a weary soul to rest; How mildly beam the closing eyes, How gently heaves the expiring breast."

OBITUARY.

Blake the infant son of B. H. and Henrietta J. Denman was born Jan. 6th, 1888 and died June 30th, 1890. This dear little babe was indeed the light and joy of the home.

The little flower was too tender for earth; it just budded here to bloom in paradise. The hearts of the parents are sad for their lovely babe is not; but he has merely gone home to Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

He will wait and welcome the coming of loved ones at the beautiful gate.

"A precious one from them is gone, A voice they loved is stilled; A place is vacant in their home, Which can never be filled."

God in His wisdom has recalled The boon his love had given; And though the body moulders here, The soul is safe in heaven."

F. A. ROGERS.

Cassie Fox, one of Tredegar's most industrious and enterprising colored citizens, has opened a first-class Ice Cream Saloon in the old REPUBLICAN building, and wishes to inform his friends where they can always get nice cream, fruit, melons, cigars, tobacco, etc. There will be an ice cream festival Tuesday night, up stairs. All are invited to come and bring the ladies. Good order will be maintained by the manager. Ice cream Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings.

The demand for Smith's Tonic Syrup is unequalled by any other chills and fever remedy. My sales are surprising.—E. J. Dreher, Lehighburg, Ill.

Surprising Testimony.

Many physicians who have examined into the merits of B. B. B. (Bottanle, Blood Balm), have been confronted with testimony which they deemed surprising, and thus convinced of its wonderful efficacy, have not failed to prescribe it in their practice as occasion required.

H. L. Cassidy, Kennesaw, Ga., writes: "For two years my wife was a great sufferer. Skillful physicians did her no good. Her mouth was one solid ulcer, her body was broken out in sores, and she lost a beautiful head of hair. Three bottles of B. B. B. cured her completely, incredible as it may sound, and she is now the mother of a healthy—three months old baby clear from any scrofulous taint."

A. H. Morris, Pine Bluff, Ark., writes: "Hot Springs and several doctors failed to cure me of running ulcers on my leg. B. B. B. effected a wonderfully quick cure after everything else had failed."

successful Cough Medicine. We have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. A Good Name.

A Good Name is Certainly Better than Riches in the business world. That is why we never permit customers to leave our store dissatisfied with their purchases.

We aim to get the Good Will of the People, and our largely increasing business shows that we have been successful. Our goods, our prices, and our straight American methods of doing business make it an object for you to

TRADE WITH US.

It's a Unique position we occupy as Leaders. This is forcibly indicated by the scores who interview us daily on styles. As we are asked, our judgment must be valued. If we know—as we do—ain't it most natural we should pattern our stock accordingly? Certainly.

The Dealers who do so much talking about the amount of money they save to the purchasers of clothing are the very ones who are making it more expensive. For instance you cannot get a whole page advertisement for nothing. Neither can any man or concern afford to sell you goods for LESS than COST and succeed.

Those who advertise goods at one half or one third of their value are still making profits big enough to pay for all the certainty they do to their customers.

Ours is a Plain,

Fair dealing house. We sell our Merchandise at a living profit. Our goods are same price to everybody. Each article is marked in Plain Figures.

No Private Cost Mark that you can't Understand. Should you buy of us and not be pleased with your purchase, we refund your money as freely as we receive it. This has been the success of our house, as

We have never refused to give back purchase money, if the article is brought back uninjured. Bear this in mind. In this advertisement we have stated how we do business; in our next we will tell you something else.

JUDGE CRISP'S LETTER

TO THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE OF HIS DISTRICT.

In Answer to the Questions Sent.

The Evils of Legislation For The Classes—His Views On The Sub-Treasury Bill—A Plan For Relief.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Judge Crisp has written a letter to the alliance of his district. It is in reply to the alliance questions which were sent him to be answered. By those who have read the letter it is pronounced the ablest yet written on the subject, and it is one of which all thinking farmers approve. After mentioning the reception of the questions, the letter is as follows:

THE JUDGE'S LETTER.

"For the seven years last past I have had the honor of representing in Congress, as a Democrat, the people of the third district of Georgia. During my services here I have had frequent occasions to investigate, to discuss and to vote upon public measures, and representing, as I do, a district whose most important industry is agriculture, quite naturally I have devoted much attention and thought to the existing and proposed laws which directly relate to or affect those engaged therein. One at all acquainted with the legislation of the last twenty-five years must be impressed with the fact that very much of it has been in favor of classes at the expense of the masses of the people. Class legislation is wrong—that is, any law which grants to one person or class of persons the rights, advantages and privileges which may not be enjoyed by every other person or class of persons is unjust, and violates the fundamental principle of Democratic government—'equality.' When you contribute your money in the way of taxes to support the government, you do not do so in order that special favors or privileges shall be granted to anybody, but you do so in order that the government, honestly and economically administered, may be enabled to discharge its functions granting 'equal rights to all, and special privileges to none.'

THE FARMERS INVESTIGATING.

The departure from these well understood and just principles has resulted in giving us a rich government, but making us a poor people. A few have built up immense fortunes, but the masses are poor. The rich grow richer, the poor grow poorer. The burdens of those in debt are made heavier and the value of fixed incomes is increased. It is not surprising then that the farmers who have been oppressed by unjust exactions are beginning to investigate for themselves the condition of the laws, and to ask why there should not be some effort to lighten the load under which they stagger. The alliance, as I understand it, was designed for the purpose of aiding and enabling the farmers of the country, by investigation, to understand, and by organization to overthrow and repeal, those laws which deny 'equal rights to all,' and which grant 'special privileges to any.' In that undertaking all lovers of justice and fair play must certainly bid you God speed, and I shall deem it not only a duty, but a pleasure, both in office and out of it, to contribute whatever of industry and ability I possess to aid and cheer you in the struggle.

FAVORS RAILROAD REGULATION.

I am heartily in favor of the regulation of railroads, so that they shall remain competitive, etc. I had the honor of having charge, on the floor of the house, of the bill which was passed in the forty-ninth congress, establishing a national railroad commission, and inaugurating a system of regulation of interstate commerce. In my speech at that time—which, I believe, was circulated in the district—I maintained the right and urged that it was the duty of congress, so far as it could, to protect the people from unjust exactions, extortions and discriminations on the part of the common carriers of the country. I favor and have spoken and voted for a reduction of tariff taxes and such a change of the laws as would reduce the burdens now resting on the agricultural and laboring classes of the country. Our present tariff law imposes an average duty of forty-seven per cent. on imported dutiable articles, and by thus putting a burden on foreign manufactured goods, enables our home manufacturers to charge home consumers nearly or quite that much in advance of what they ought to pay for the home made articles they buy.

ILLUSTRATION OF PROTECTION.

Our people pay $220,000,000 tax on duty on foreign goods, which goes into the treasury, and they pay at least $500,000,000 enhanced price on home made goods, which goes into the pockets of the American manufacturers. Let me illustrate this: Suppose there was no tariff law and a hat could be brought from Liverpool and sold here for $1. The American manufacturer of hats would have to sell a like hat at the same price or go out of the business. A tariff law which imposes a duty of forty-seven per cent. on imported hats, would force the American purchaser of the same foreign hat to pay $1.47 for it and would enable the American manufacturer to charge $1.47 for the same American hat. This makes clear the tax that is put upon the buyers of hats, and it also makes clear at whose expense and how the American manufacturer is protected. The tariff law thus increases the price of nearly everything the farmers have to buy, and while the increase on any one article may not be very great in the aggregate it amounts to more than a thousand million dollars. This vast sum is unjustly taken from the farmers and other consumers in the United States and given to a privileged class, the manufacturers.

If our laws accorded 'equal rights to all and special privileges to none,' a large part of these millions, instead of going into the treasury to be extravagantly expended, or into the pockets of the protective manufacturers to add to the enormous fortunes, now possessed by many of that class, would remain in the pockets of the people where they rightly belong.

OPPOSED TO THE BANKING SYSTEM.

I favor the passage of such laws as will prevent speculation and combines, that seek to interfere with the prices of prime necessities and productions. I am opposed to our national banking laws, for the reason that they grant special privileges to the banks organized thereunder and discriminate against the farmer. I do not believe that any private corporation should be given the right to regulate, to any extent, the amount of legal tender money that should be in circulation. I do not believe that it is just or right that private corporations should be permitted to contract or expand, at will, the currency of the country. I favor, and have in the forty-ninth congress and this session spoken and voted in favor of the free coinage of silver. I favor, too, the issue of such an additional amount of treasury notes as will give us money sufficient to answer the demands of trade and commerce.

I believe that the agricultural laboring classes are now suffering more from a contraction of the currency than from any other cause. We have not enough money in the country. The consequence is that the purchasing power of money is unduly enhanced. The prices of what the farmer has to sell are too low and the burden of his debts is too great. Let me illustrate this: Suppose a bank held your note for $120. If there was money enough in the country for the wants of trade, cotton would bring say 12 cents a pound, and two bales of cotton would pay the debt. If the currency was greatly contracted, as it has been and now is, you could get only say 8 cents a pound for your cotton, and it would take three bales to pay the same debt. The amount of the debt in dollars has not changed at all, and yet legislation contracting the currency has increased your burden to the extent of one bale of cotton, and at the same time increased the value of the note held by the bank the same amount. The contraction of the currency has inflicted upon the masses of the people untold injury, and a proper increase of the circulating medium would afford us more immediate relief than almost any law that could be passed.

THE SUB-TREASURY BILL.

This brings me to the last question propounded—that relating to the sub-treasury bill. So far as that measure seeks to afford relief and assistance to those engaged in the productions of the articles mentioned therein, it has my hearty sympathy. But it does not occur that the object sought would be accomplished by its passage, nor does it appear that the bill conforms to that principle which you and I, and all other good Democrats, so ardently advocate—"civil rights to all and special privileges to none."

The bill would require the expenditure of millions of money for the erection of warehouses. This money must be raised by taxation, and all of our people would be required to pay their proportionate part thereof. Thousands of United States officers would have to be appointed to manage, control and superintend such warehouses, and these officers would have to be appointed by the president of the United States, courts or the heads of departments of the United States, and the constitution of the United States, which is the supreme law of the land, denies to congress the power of passing any law which would give to the people of any State or community the right of themselves electing such managers. The president, the heads of departments and nearly all the judges of the United States courts belong to the Republican party, so that we might, if the law was passed, confidently expect such managers to be Republicans; and, judging by the appointments made in the South for the past eighteen months, we might also expect them to be such Republicans as are not entitled to the confidence and esteem of the people, and whose chief desire and purpose would be to stir up strife between the races, thus disturbing that peace and harmony which is so essential to our prosperity. I fear, too, that other grievances would result from the passage of the bill.

The farmers whose necessities did not demand an advance of money, of course would not incur the expense of storage, insurance and interest incident to a deposit of their cotton in the warehouses when they could avoid this and at the same time get the advance in price by simply keeping their cotton under shelter at home. This class would necessarily have to bear the increased taxation necessary to raise the money to execute the law and would receive no benefit therefrom. The merchant, the doctor, the mechanic, the day laborer, the wool raiser, the saw mill owner, the turpentine producers, and all others of every occupation who do not have for deposit the articles mentioned in the bill, would be required to pay their proportionate part of the taxes necessary to sustain the system, and yet could obtain no privileges thereunder. Shall we, who have so long, so earnestly and so justly insisted upon the repeal of all laws which tax some for the exclusive benefit of others, now abandon that principle? Unfortunately, many of our best farmers and best men are in debt, and that, too, without fault on their part. If it could be made clearly to appear that the proposed law would benefit or assist them in the heroic struggle they are now making for relief from their embarrassments, that would be very much in its favor; but a careful examination of the provisions of the bill and much thought devoted to its probable effect has satisfied me that no substantial good to any class could come from it. I fear it might unsettle values; I fear it would result in great loss to those whose necessities prompted them to deposit their crops, and I fear it would make certain and easy the formation of combinations and trusts to control, at the will of the speculator, the price of the prime necessities of life.

Sympathizing fully and unreservedly with the object and purpose of your organization, I think I can suggest a better plan than that proposed in the sub-treasury bill—a plan more likely to relieve the people; a plan not open to objection, and one which we are more likely to be able to carry out than any other which promises relief. The farmers need relief; they need speedy relief, and I submit that it is the part of wisdom in choosing a measure or measures to afford it, and to press such as we can reasonably hope to pass, and such as experience has demonstrated will accomplish our purpose, rather than to insist upon one that is novel; which involves the expenditure of vast sums of money; which many of our best and most worthy farmers oppose; which many persons believe would prove a curse rather than a blessing, and which, I venture to say, it would be almost, if not quite impossible to pass. Recognizing fully the pressing necessity for relief, the remedy I would suggest is: Increase largely the currency of the country, so that the burdens of debt in debt will be lightened; provide for the free coinage of silver; reduce greatly the tariff, so that the millions that are now annually unjustly exacted from the people may remain with them; repeal all laws of every kind and character which grant to any person or class of persons special privileges and advantages over others, and insist upon an economical administration of the affairs of the government. The farmers all over the country are investigating the cause of the languishing condition of agriculture. They will find it in the special and class legislation of the republican party to which I have referred. When the cause is clearly understood, it seems to me the remedy should appear to them, and simple they will find it, and organization and co-operation will enable them to find it most quickly in the repeal of special and class legislation; in the increase of currency; in an economical administration of the affairs of the government, and in the enforcement of the principle so well expressed in the motto of our order: "Equal Rights to All and Special Privileges to None."

I have written at some length, because I could not, in fewer words, define my position, and I have written frankly and candidly because I fully realize and recognize your rights as friends and as democrats, to know my views on any public question. I have always believed that between a representative and the people whom he represents there should be perfect candor and frankness. I have always acted upon the idea, and no consideration personal to myself will ever prompt me to depart therefrom. Representing a district whose chief industry is agriculture, and numbering among my dearest and nearest friends many engaged therein, and bound to the farmers of the district by the strongest ties of gratitude for their past kindness, confidence and support, I would be strange indeed if I were not only willing, but anxious, to urge and advocate any just measure that promised to afford them, in the slightest degree, relief from the unequal and oppressive laws which they have so long endured in silence; which have contributed so much to their present depressed condition and which are so odious, so indefensible and so unjust.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES F. CRISP.

Did the Old Farmer Lie?

Sheffield Enterprise.

An old farmer living near Sheffield was just beaming with joy a few weeks ago, he confidently told the reporter, over a brimming glass of soda water that he had made or was on the eve of making one of the greatest discoveries since Newton discovered that an apple or a whole fruit store would come down if thrown above. The reporter naturally expected to hear a new perpetual motion scheme or to be shown a "sightograph," but neither did the honest old granger erring on him. The discovery was of an agricultural nature. He had crossed a slip of Concord grape vine with a mountain sprout watermelon vine and was expecting to husband grapes the size of watermelons. Well, yesterday he turned up, but the beam was not with him, and as he "chucked" several sides of bacon into his wagon they fell with a spiteful rattle that seemed to assist him in throwing off his bad humor. When he saw the reporter he came bravely forward and said in a slightly emotional tone: "Look here, yer know them grapes I was talking about? Well, instead of them growin' biges watermelons, whatter yer recon happened?" The reporter didn't guess—no revenue in guessing. "Well, sir, I went out yesterday and took a look at the vines I grafted an' I'll be darned if they want chuck full o' ripe watermelons no bigger than grapes."

The reporter walked silently away.

NO FORCE BILL THIS YEAR.

THAT SEEMS TO BE THE PROSPECT NOW.

Republican Senators Reluctant to Adopt a Gag Rule—Efforts of the Schemers to Pass the Rascally Measure.

Washington National Democrat.

Do the Republicans really intend to pass the Reed force bill?

If they do, can the Democrats in the Senate prevent them from doing it?

These are the conundrums of the hour in Washington.

As we go to press the situation seems to be that while a considerable number of Republican Senators are very anxious to pass the Reed bill in a more or less modified form, there is also a considerable number of Republican Senators who are not at all anxious to do this thing at the present session, and whose indifference bids fair to defeat the purposes of the hot heads.

But the Democratic Senators are prepared for anything that the Republicans may attempt to do, and if a purpose is manifested to crowd the Reed force scheme through at the present session of Congress, it will be resisted by every expedient which ingenuity can devise or endurance sustain.

The facts in regard to the feeling in the Senate are probably well summarized by Senator Hearst, of California, in an interview. He says:

"I sincerely believe the measure does not command the approval of Senators Davis, Teller, Wolcott, Mitchell, Jones or Allison, in the West, or of Senators Aldrich, Morrill or Edmunds, in the East. In fact, I am somewhat inclined to think that quite a number of Republicans in the House voted for the bill only because they were satisfied it would be killed in the Senate. I am thoroughly satisfied in my own mind that the Lodge election bill will never pass, for even if it should get through the Senate with a slight amendment that would necessitate its return to the House, I believe it would fail there with all the arbitrary measures Speaker Reed might attempt to force."

Concerning the Republicans who do not desire to see the bill become a law Senator Hearst says: "In their own consciousness, as I think, they are satisfied that the passage of the bill would prove more of an injury than an advantage to their party. The Senators are conscious of the mutual interdependence of the North and the South to secure the material prosperity of the whole country; they are not ignorant of the fact that a law like that contemplated in this bill could only be enforced in the South by the armed power of the Government; that while this would not, and could not, bring about a renewal of anything like a sectional general conflict, there would be local contests at every point where the South was threatened with negro domination; that such contests must arrest the development and destroy the present prosperity of the South, resulting in the loss of a large portion of the vast amount of Northern capital now invested in that section."

The Republican Senators have held several caucuses during the past week for the consideration of some method of putting a stop to debate in the Senate, which the advocates of the bill clearly see is the only possible method of making the passage of the bill even possible. In pursuance of a resolution adopted at the first caucus, the chairman, Mr. Edmunds, appointed Senators Hoar, Spooner, Frye and Moody, together with Senators Aldrich, Sherman and Ingalls (the Republican members of the rules committee) to report as a caucus committee, upon the question of changing the rules of the Senate so as to provide for a closure of debate at the will of the majority, and to ascertain and report how that result can be attained if deemed necessary to the conduct of business.

These Senators reported a form of a rule at a caucus held on Monday evening, which is described as "the previous question in a modified form." The Senators discussed proposed rule for nearly three hours, and then rejected it. The trouble was said to be in the wording of the rule. Members of the committee admitted that the language of their proposal was a little involved, and other Senators said very frankly that they could not understand it. It limited debate, but it did so in a very roundabout way. The discussion ended with a vote referring the rule back to the special committee, with instructions to prepare another one that would accomplish the desired end in a way that all could understand, and that would not be its wording strung up a rumpus, to be settled in the Senate. Then, by what is officially declared to have been a large majority, it was agreed that when a satisfactory rule had been drawn up it should be adopted.

The fact is that the Republican Senators were unable to agree as to what should be considered "a reasonable time" for the continuance of debate and there is no prospect that they will be able to agree.

But even if they should come to an agreement the proposed change in the rules cannot be effected without a resort to violence.

Any proposition to change the rules can be defeated for months if the minority wish, and this debate cannot be cut off without all rules being abandoned. This the older and more conservative Republican Senators are not ready to undertake.

Meantime the tariff bill has been taken up in the Senate and the discussion of it will continue till September 1, or later.

Under these circumstances the Republicans will be compelled to go to the people and argue their case, and a sorry time they are likely to have. The people will sit at the November elections that they want neither force bills nor the advocates of force bills.

Everything seems to be working in favor of a Democratic majority of seventy-five in the next House of Representatives.

An amusing feature of the effort to rush through the force bill was the publication through the associated press of an appeal from Representative Belden, as the Chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, to the Republican editors of the country to urge the passage of the bill. Mr. Belden promptly announced, in an interview, that he never saw the "address" to which his name was signed until it appeared in the papers. The document was prepared by Reed & Co., here in Washington, without Belden's knowledge. It has fallen absolutely flat. The Republican papers are not responding enthusiastically, for they know that the whole scheme is an unpopular one, and a dangerous one for their party.

A SINGULAR INCIDENT.

A Young Lady Selects the Spot on Which She is Buried.

Anniston Free Press.

Miss Mattie Skelton, the 18 year old daughter of Mr. Green B. Skelton, died on Sunday and was buried at Four Miles Church, yesterday, near which is located her home.

Measles have been prevailing in the vicinity for some time. One afternoon, a couple of weeks since, the young lady carried several of her intimate friends to the cemetery, told them that she would soon take the measles and die, and pointed out the spot upon which she wished to be buried. She also stated that she wished for Rev. F. M. Treadaway to conduct the funeral services over her remains.

Within a week she had taken the disease, and within another was a corpse. Out of respect to her wishes the chosen minister conducted the services and her remains lie interred in the identical spot chosen.

Malaria.

Nothing makes one feel so mean and incapacitated for work as a touch of malaria. How the bones ache. What chilly and lifeless sensations. What a poor appetite and what poor digestion. Here, James, run and get me some quinine; or stop, quinine doesn't just agree with me either. It makes my head feel like it would burst. It creates a buzzing sound in my ears. It impairs my digestion. It makes me feel dizzy. It gives me nausea; and a physician once told me that quinine sometimes causes paralysis. No! you needn't get it. I won't take quinine. What is that? You say your mother takes Smith's Tonic Syrup when she has malaria, and that it always cures her, and that it also cured your brother of chills and fever. Well, get me a bottle of Smith's Tonic Syrup, and be quick. Come to think about it I have read that this medicine has all the good effects of quinine and none of its evil nature. Strange I haven't tried it before.

Campaign in Cherokee.

CENTER, July 21.—One of the largest political meetings ever held in Cherokee county took place in the circuit court room to-day. The meeting lasted nearly three hours. Col. Thomas G. Jones, Judge Inzer and Hon. William H. Denson made speeches. Col. Jones' speech was deliberative, interspersed with a few well received anecdotes. He will carry this county almost unanimously.

Col. Denson made the telling speech of the day. He received round after round of applause. Col. Denson was interrupted by Col. Charles Rattray, independent candidate for representative, but this only made the fight fiercer, and the cries of "Denson, go on!" was the unanimous shout. The democracy of Cherokee is solid.

TILLMAN AND HUGHSON

Face Each Other, and a Riot Almost Ensues.

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 18.—The political meeting at Marion yesterday came nearest yet to bloodshed.

Tillman, the alliance candidate, in the course of his speech, brought it on.

He has been denouncing the Charleston News and Courier at all of the campaign meetings, his favorite expression being that "lying rotten sheet."

On this occasion he added: "If any of you take it, just look at this meeting to-day, and read the report of it in that sheet."

At this, Shirley C. Hughson, who was reporting the meeting for the News and Courier, rose, and going up to Tillman said:

"Captain Tillman, if you mean to say, sir, that I have misrepresented you, you are an infernal liar and the truth is not in you."

The two men were within five feet of each other, and the eyes of both sparkled with anger and resentment. Captain Tillman turned around and faced the newspaper man, making some remark which was drowned by the noise. They stood glaring at each other for a moment, and in the meantime the crowd began to sway with excitement. A chorus of voices said:

"Put him off the stand; put him off the stand."

There was a wild rush made for the platform. The straightest democrats, however, crowded around Hughson and kept the enraged Tillmanites at bay. A score or more of these crawled on the stage with open knives and other weapons of offense. Again and again the cry rang out: "Put him off, put him off, put him off."

In obedience to the command, three or four policemen with drawn clubs climbed on the banisters of the platform and started towards Mr. Hughson, who stood with one hand in his hip pocket and defied them to put their hands on him. Hughson, in the meantime, was completely surrounded by his friends, and the policemen were forced back to the ground. The platform literally trembled under the weight and strain, and every moment threatened a hand to hand struggle between the two factions.

At the same meeting Tillman accused J. W. Barnwell and Judge Haskell, two of the leaders of the straight democracy, of having threatened to assassinate him, and it is not improbable that more trouble will grow out of this.

JUDGE SOMERVILLE RESIGNS.

He is Called to Washington and Goes on Monday.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., July 19.—The Daily Gazette of this city will say tomorrow: "Judge Somerville on yesterday received official notification from Hon. George C. Tichenor, assistant secretary of the treasury, to come to Washington at the earliest practicable day he could. It is supposed that the purpose is to qualify the several general appraisers who have been appointed, and to organize the board under the existing law. He expects to leave for Washington on Monday or Tuesday, probably via Montgomery."

Judge Somerville on yesterday mailed to Governor Seay his formal resignation as judge of the supreme court of Alabama, a position which he has so ably filled for the past ten years. He is receiving numerous letters and telegrams of congratulation from his old friends, especially members of the bar, and his old law students, who are scattered all over Alabama, in almost every town and village.

A special from Spokane Falls, Wash., says a sensational tragedy was enacted there in a newspaper office. Negotiations have been for several days pending for a prize fight between Patsy Milligan and Jimmy Casey. They met this morning at the Spokeman's office by agreeing to settle on the details for the proposed fight. While talking the matter over quietly, Billy Lind, a friend of Casey, started a quarrel with Milligan. The latter knocked him down and he was put out of the office. He went to the back door, and coming in behind Milligan, shot him twice, the wound being considered mortal. Ed. Smith, another pugilist, was struck in the knee, and will lose his leg. Lind is in jail.

AFTER JUDGE BOX.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—I noticed a communication some days ago in the Age-Herald, about the one man power of our Supreme Court and suggesting that a change be had in its members, that some of the old-time historical respect and confidence may return to the Supreme Judicial Tribunal of the State.

While there is a growing disposition among the people of the State to enforce recognition of the rights of the masses in government, I hope to see the change come in the members of that court, at the next election.

But it is no less important for the people of this, the 7th judicial circuit, to look to the office of its presiding Judge. We have a Judge at present that has concluded that he is court and jury too. The jury system of our land has come to us from our mother country. It is one of those privileges that has come to us from the expenditure of much blood and treasure—arrested from the hand of tyranny and oppression. Trial by jury has ever been deemed by the Anglo-Saxon people as a bulwark of their liberties and a sacred protection to their rights of property. But here in this, the 7th judicial circuit of the State of Alabama, we have a man who has repeatedly usurped the functions of the jury. His court is a one-man power, unless the verdict of the jury is in strict accord with his own notion of the facts. He does not hesitate to set aside verdicts of a jury half so much as he hesitates to change an order of his own making. The verdict of the Court, is without the slightest hesitation, substituted for the verdict of jury. Juries, and jury trial, under his reign, are practically abolished. He not only invades the province of the jury in civil cases where the rights of property are involved, when as it seems he may carry favor in certain quarters, but he has gone further, and in a case where a man's liberty was in jeopardy, in a criminal trial, arbitrarily, capriciously, tyrannically, and without authority of law, dismissed a jury for disagreeing with a prisoner when they were the sole judges of the facts; and when too, that jury was composed of twelve of as competent, enlightened and virtuous men as reside in our county. We should look to our liberties and rights of property, and try to find a man next time who is not a usurper, not an autocrat like Speaker Reed, but one who has some respect for the sacred functions of twelve honest and capable jurors, and for the institutions which have come to us through centuries.

CITIZEN.

Notes From Schenck's Springs (Sulphur Springs).

Sulphur Springs, Ala., July 25.—Quite a number of Jacksonville and Tredegar people have rented the cottages at this famous summer resort to spend the summer.

The following have arrived and are enjoying the water:

Mr. Jerome Vansandt, wife and daughter; Mrs. C. E. Bondurant and daughter; Lulla; Mrs. Seab Matthews, Misses Lena Matthews and Minnie Matthews; Mr. Ed Vansandt and Master Whit Matthews.

The parties who have already been here two weeks are receiving so much benefit from the waters that they will remain until September 1st.

The party will be joined later by Mrs. Matthews' mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Cook, of Jacksonville. Mr. Charlie Bondurant, of Jacksonville, paid his wife and daughter a flying visit this week.

Mrs. McClusky and daughters spent Sunday with the Jacksonville party who are summering at the Springs.

Mrs. Fannie H. Hayden, relict of the late Thos. H. Hayden, died at her home in Talladega recently. Her remains were interred in the family lot in Oak Hill Cemetery.

LITTLE HELEN KELLAR.

Her Remarkable Intellect, Though Born Deaf and Blind.

The following, written for the Nashville American, concerning little Helen Kellar, of Tusculum, Ala., contains a beautiful little narrative worthy of a place in the story book. The writer says:

Although this "little marvel of the nineteenth century" is widely known as one to whom the power of speech has been miraculously restored after years of silence, yet she possesses many remarkable characteristics which are calculated to win the admiration of the general public, but which are not so well known. When her tender age, and the fact of her having been totally blind and deaf from infancy are taken into consideration, her literary attainments are astonishing. To give one or two examples: During her last term at the Perkins Institute she was one day placed among other pupils in a class undergoing examination in geography; the teacher desired each scholar to write a description of New York city from memory, giving the class so many minutes in which to complete the task. When the time expired she called upon each pupil to hand up her paper. Not one had succeeded in filling out a page except little Helen. She had written seven pages, and ended her graphic description thus: "People from all the countries in the world come to New York city, that is why it is called a cosmopolitan city!" Think of this from a child of ten. No wonder the audience clapped and applauded when this paper was read by the teacher. At another examination, this time in etymology, a favorite study with Helen, each member of the class was told to write down all she could think upon the subject. They did their best, but again our small scholar was destined to carry off the palm. She wrote sixteen pages, which were read aloud on the spot without one word of correction, and created quite a sensation. The dear child writes beautiful little stories, taking for her subjects the interesting habits of the insect world, with whose curious instincts and ways of living she has made herself so familiar. No doubt you will be surprised to learn that this small person is an excellent horsewoman, yet such is the case; she not only sits well, but she rides fearlessly, and manages her little donkey—a present from an old friend of Captain Kellar—with perfect skill. Of course she is not allowed to ride alone. Some trusty person always accompanies her to prevent accidents.

Helen's ideas of religion and that world which is one day to set this right are peculiarly original and beautiful. Yet great care has been taken to prevent her sunny nature from being clouded by gloomy thoughts or warped by straight-laced prejudices. Miss Sullivan, who has been her devoted teacher and friend for several years, gives an amusing account of a rencontre between a Boston divine and her little charge. He questioned Miss Sullivan closely as to whether Helen had been taught the "doctrines of our church" and fully realized her condition as a lost sinner, totally depraved by nature, etc. She replied that although her father and mother were members of the Presbyterian church Helen had not as yet been taught much about doctrines. Hereupon the preacher desired the privilege of asking the child a few questions. Miss Sullivan gave her consent with a solemn face and he seated himself beside the little girl.

"Do you pray?" was the first query.

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"What do you pray for?"

When Miss Sullivan translated this second question on her fingers to Helen, a lovely smile lit up the dear child's face, as she answered in her newly found voice:

"I pray to be made beautiful within, and free from every taint and sin."

The vanquished divine had no more to say.

Mr. Whittier, having manifested a desire to see Helen, she paid him a visit before leaving Boston for her home in Tusculum; the venerable poet was delighted with her, and could hardly be persuaded to part with her. Dr. O. W. Holmes was also greatly pleased with the wonderful child, and insisted upon devoting himself to her exclusively during her stay, although the room was full of guests who had come to do him honor.

The little girl is so remarkably sweet in disposition, so sunny by nature, so affectionate and above all so forgiving and charitable, that her father says she has "knocked all his preconceived ideas of total depravity and sin endwise." He asserts positively that if one were to wantonly and purposely injure the child she would immediately begin to find excuses for him. Ah, it is easy to see that she lives close to God in the silence and darkness; in her cup of life's experience no gall drops have been mingled. Well may the southern land be proud of claiming as her daughter this pure, sweet, character, this wonderful intellect, this "marvel of the nineteenth century," our own dear little Helen Kellar.

At Home at Last.

A Soldier Gets Home From The War And Creates a Sensation.

Opelika, Ala., July 21.—The return of John McGee to his former home in Chambers County, Friday, has created a big sensation. McGee, as a young man of 18 years of age, went to the war in the Sixth Alabama Regiment, of which Gen. John B. Gordon was First Lieutenant. In the famous charge made by that regiment in the battle of the Seven Pines, McGee was among the missing, and it was supposed that he was killed until yesterday when he presented himself with full proofs of his identity. It seems that he was taken prisoner and carried to Johnston's Island, but found it so difficult to pursue his journey southward that he accepted the hospitality of a farmer near Zaldio, whose daughter he subsequently married, and there he has remained ever since. He found his mother and father both dead upon his return, but his four brothers and three sisters are all living around the old homestead.

Tusculum Gazette: Mr. John Findley, Jr., of Northport, on yesterday had on exhibition, in this city, a freak of nature that is not often seen. It was two large well-developed watermelons, grown from the same stem. The oldest watermelon raisers who viewed the curiosity declared that they never saw anything like it before. Mr. Findley should, if possible, preserve it for exhibition at the State Fair.

What Kind of Advertising Pays?

So many houses are now claiming in large type, each to sell goods from 20 to 50 per cent cheaper than any other house, that we believe sensible people disgusted with these improbable yarns, are paying but little attention to display ads. For that reason we have taken but little space in the papers but have adopted the plan of advertising our own counters by offering every week some new things at less than real value, and by keeping every department fresh all the time with novelties. It seems to work well. Our trade is growing very fast.

This week we shall offer many styles of WASH DRESS GOODS, including Thin Black Goods, White Goods, Printed Mulls, Batiste, Lawns, Challus and Scotch and French Gingham. They are all marked in plain figures. Drop in and look at them.

OBITUARY.

In loving remembrance of little Charles Herman Borden, infant son of C. E. and S. M. Borden who reside at the head of Nancy's Creek Valley.

The angel of death came and bore him hence on the 25th of May 1890. He was 6 months and 4 days old. His mother preceded him to the better land three months and some days to await his coming. When the silver cord was loosed, the golden bowl broken. Mrs. T. H. Arnett, his grandmother, had him her care who prided herself in trying to make this precious young bud blossoming into life happy. Though he was very attractive to relatives and friends.

The good Lord saw that it was not best for him to remain in their midst and be educated in the school of this life, therefore, He took him to a higher school to be educated in holy and divine things to perfection.

Happy child, thou art permitted through the precious blood of Christ to rest where the "wicked cease from troubling and where the weary be at rest." May the Lord bless and comfort the father and all the relatives with the holy spirit His grace and with His exceeding great and precious promises. Little Herman, you cannot bring back to you, but you may go where he has gone. He who never erred, said: "Suffer little children to come unto me for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

FINAL SETTLEMENT.

STATE OF ALABAMA,
Calhoun County.

In Probate Court for said County, special term, July 7th 1890.

This day came H. F. Montgomery, C. D. Martin and J. J. Skilton, Comptrollers, to sell Lands of J. D. Privett deceased for division and filed in Court their account and vouchers for a final settlement of their acts and doings in the premises.

It is therefore ordered by the court that the 5th day of August 1890, be and is hereby appointed the day upon which to audit and pass upon said account and make said settlement; and that notice thereof be given for three successive weeks in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper printed and published in said county, as a notice to all persons concerned, to be and appear before me, at my office in the court house of said county, on said 5th day of August 1890, and contest said settlement if they think proper.

IMPORTANT CHANGE IN THE HOME-STEAD ENTRY LAWS.

Commissioner Groff's Letter—The Law as Amended—Not Necessary to Apply at the Land Office to Make Entries.

Mr. J. H. Bingham, the Register of the United States land office in this city, furnishes The Journal with the following circular letter from Commissioner Groff and an important amendment to the law regulating the methods of making homestead entries:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 25, 1900.
To Registrars and Receivers, U. S. Land Office:

GENTLEMEN—Your attention is called to the provisions of an act of congress, entitled: "An act to amend section twenty-two hundred and ninety-four of the revised statutes of the United States, and for other purposes," approved May 26, 1890, a copy of which is hereto attached.

The second paragraph refers to the preliminary affidavits, no affidavit, however, being required when a pre-emption declaratory statement is filed.

Under its provisions, said affidavits, when the applicant is prevented by reason of distance, bodily infirmity, or other good cause, when personal attendance at the local land office whether he is residing on the land or not, may be made before the clerk of a court of record for the county in which the land is situated or any commissioner of the United States circuit court having jurisdiction over the county in which the land is situated.

The third paragraph refers to final proofs and affidavits required to be made under the homestead, pre-emption, timber culture, and desert land laws, and provides that said proofs and affidavits may be made before any commissioner of the United States circuit court having jurisdiction over the county in which the lands are situated, or before the judge or clerk (not necessarily the clerk in absence of the judge) or any court of record of the county or parish in which the lands are situated.

The remaining paragraphs relate to the fees which may be charged by officers other than the local officers before whom proofs may be made, but do not affect the laws governing the fees which may be charged by the local officers.

Very respectfully,
LEWIS A. GROFF,
Commissioner.
Approved:
JOHN W. NOBLE, Secretary.

PUBLIC—No. 132.
An act to amend section twenty-two hundred and ninety-four of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and for other purposes.
Be it enacted by Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that section twenty-two hundred and ninety-four of the Revised Statutes be and the same is hereby amended so that it will read as follows:

Sec. 2294. In any case in which the applicant for the benefit of the homestead pre-emption, timber culture, or desert land law is prevented by reason of distance, bodily infirmity or other good cause, from personal attendance at the district land office he or she may make the affidavit required by law before any commissioner of the United States circuit court or the clerk of a court of record for the county in which the land is situated, and transmit the same, with the fee and commissions to the register and receiver.

That the proof of settlement, residence, occupation, cultivation, irrigation, or reclamation, the affidavits of non-alienation, the oath of allegiance, all other affidavits required to be made under the homestead, pre-emption, timber culture, and desert land laws, may be made before any commissioner of the United States circuit court, or before the judge or clerk of any court of record of any county or parish in which the lands are situated; and the proof, affidavit and oath when so made and duly subscribed, shall have the same force and effect as if made before the register and receiver when transmitted to them, with the fee and commissions allowed and required by law. That if any witness making such proof or any applicant making any such affidavit or oath, shall knowingly, willfully and corruptly swear falsely to any material matter contained in said proofs, affidavits, or oaths, he shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be liable to the same pains and penalty as if he had sworn falsely before the register. That the fees for entries and for final proofs, when made before any other officer than the register and receiver, shall be as follows:

For each affidavit, twenty-five cents.
For each deposition of claimant or witness, when not prepared by the officer, twenty-five cents.
For each deposition of claimant or witness prepared by the officer, one dollar.

Any officer demanding or receiving a greater sum for such service shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by a fine not exceeding $100.

Approved May 26, 1890.

English Cotton Views.

The Liverpool Post, in reviewing the market, says: "It is certain that the situation is healthier than it was at this time last year, when spinners had already begun to make preparations for a resort to short time, and it may be granted that the contracts now held by spinners will, along with the miscellaneous business doing from day to day, keep the spindles at full work until the close of the season, even if prices advance a little further; but, as they hold larger stocks at the mills than they did twelve months ago, they are in a position to temporarily withdraw from the market in the event of any sudden bound of importance in value. The course of prices for the coming month or two will mainly depend, therefore, upon the action of spinners. In the meantime opinion here is much divided. On the one side it is said that the present strong position was foreseen and acted upon several months ago; while on the other, it is maintained that the late decline created a sufficient volume of new business in Manchester, and a sufficiently large 'bear' account here to lift prices to a higher level than seemed probable a short time back. It is manifest, however, that if the accounts about the new crop continue fairly favorable, prices will not run away, though they may temporarily advance above the present. * * * It is known that the stock in Liverpool is much smaller than the official estimate. It was also smaller last year; but the error this year is somewhat larger. In 1888 and 1887 the stock here was much larger than the estimate. The stocks at the mills are larger than they were a year ago; but the difference as compared with two and three years ago is not important."

Knifed Six People.

Edwardsville, July 19.—A picnic was held at Muscadine, eight miles east of this place on the Georgia Pacific railroad to-day. There were addresses made by Rev. W. O. Butler, of Oxford, candidate for congress from the seventh district, and Judge T. J. Burton of this place. Every thing went off nicely until about one o'clock when Marshal Hartfield was in the act of putting up some one who was disturbing the peace, one George Chandler made a break to liberate his brother, the prisoner, cutting everybody who came in his way. He succeeded in cutting some five or six and made his escape. Marshal Hartfield was one of the unfortunates. The wounded are getting on very well. Bad blood and whiskey was the cause of the trouble.

Be sure to get the genuine. Like every other good thing, S. S. S. is imitated and aped by hundreds of people, who prey on the credulity of suffering humanity. Do not be imposed on by any of these imitations. Many of them contain poisons, and are dangerous. There is only one S. S. S. and there is nothing like it. The McKinley bill if it is enacted into law is notice to foreign countries that none of their goods can enter into the ports of this country. This being so, what is the need of a Ship Subsidy law, involving an expenditure of $15,000,000 per annum. There will be no carrying for them as France, Germany and England are all discussing the propriety of retaliatory law. If they should put up the duty on American wheat, and other grain, and beef and pork, where will the Western farmer find a market for his surplus?—Montgomery Advertiser.

The Home Paper's Position.

No paper can be published without home patronage, and every man is interested in keeping up a home paper. If a railroad or factory is wanted, the newspapers are expected to work for it. If a public meeting is wanted for any purpose, the newspaper is called upon for a free notice. The newspapers must puff the schools and everything else to advance the interests of the business men of the place, and then give them a handsome notice when they pass away. And yet, some of them do nothing to keep up a home paper.—Gladstone (Mich.) Express.

A Good Name.

A Good Name is Certainly Better than Riches in the business world. That is why we never permit customers to leave our store dissatisfied with their purchases.

We aim to get the Good Will of the People, and our largely increasing business shows that we have been successful. Our goods, our prices, and our straight American methods of doing business make it an object for you to

TRADE WITH US.

It's a Unique position we occupy as Leaders. This is forcibly indicated by the scores who interview us daily on styles. As we are asked, our judgment must be valued. If we know—as we do— isn't it most natural we should pattern our stock accordingly? Certainly.

The Dealers who do so much talking about the amount of money they save to the purchasers of clothing are the very ones who who are making it more expensive. For instance you cannot get a whole page advertisement for nothing. Neither can any man or concern afford to sell you goods for LESS than COST and succeed.

Those who advertise goods at one half or one third of their value are still making profits big enough to pay for all the charity they do to their customers.

Ours is a Plain,

Fair dealing house. We sell our Merchandise at a living profit. Our goods are same price to everybody. Each article is marked in Plain Figures.

No Private Cost Mark that you can't Understand. Should you buy of us and not be pleased with your purchase, we refund your money as freely as we receive it. This has been the success of our house, as

We have never refused to give back purchase money, if the article is brought back unimpaired. Bear this in mind. In this advertisement we have stated how we do business; in our next we will tell you something else.
